Seminar Information & Program

Nature-based Solutions (NbS) are expected to serve as an integrated approach to addressing global challenges such as climate change, natural disasters, and biodiversity conservation. Forests are the primary type of terrestrial ecosystem, and their multifaceted functions play a major role in advancing NbS.

In this seminar, we will reaffirm the importance of Nature-based Solutions (NbS) as a strategy for comprehensively addressing various global challenges—including those related to climate change—that involve synergies and trade-offs as we look toward 2030 and beyond to 2050. We will also discuss approaches and challenges for maximizing the role of forests in supporting NbS, based on presentations from different perspectives.
